We, the class of 1960, dedicate this yearbook to
Mrs. Reva Johnson, our librarian, in recognition of her efforts to teach us the truth of the following lines:

There is no frigate like a book
To take us lands away,
Nor any coursers like a page
Of prancing poetry.

This traverse may the poorest take
Without oppress of toll;
How frugal is the chariot
That bears a human soul!

Books Are My Friends

When I'm bored or have the blues,
 I look for a good book to choose.
 There are thin books and fat books,
 Many books with different looks,
 Biographies, adventures,
 Love stories and histories,
 Fiction books, career books,
 Encyclopedias and mysteries.

I'm on a train
 Off to Spain,
 Now it's Hollywood,
 The land of fame.
 Then I'm a guest
 In the colorful West.

Instead of watching T V
 Open a book and really SEE!
 Many a book that has been penned
 Will become your life-long friend.

Phyllis Shtafman 8A

Wishing Your Life Away

When I was three,
I wished to be
A school girl in first grade.

When I was eight
I couldn't wait
To be a teen-age maid.

The teens I sought
Have now been brought
To me by Father Time.
I'm not impressed;
I'm still in quest
Of the perfect age sublime.

Enjoy each phase,
Don't think of ways
To make the time go fast.
For when you're old
You'll long to hold
The glorious days gone past.

Adrienne Marder 8-K

The Never-ending Search

Far away, where the gold of the harvest crops in the field meets the fiery red of the sunset at the horizon, there is a Utopia, a perfect life. But you are here, at the opposite horizon, where green grass meets the blue sky at sunrise. You are at the threshold of life, with your years to come ahead of you.

From the moment you rise over the horizon as a fresh, new being, you are searching for the tomorrow that will open its doors and let you through to the Shangri-la, but you can never reach it. It becomes more and more distant as you seek it. As you stand loftily on a mountain peak, contemplating your future, you may glimpse this perfect world. You spend your entire life scaling mountains, and crossing plains searching for that life that never seems to be attained.

As you get farther and farther away from the moment you emerged, the sunrise is behind you and the horizon is nearer. Finally you are ready to leave your years of struggling behind, and let your children seek this truly happy, peaceful world in your place. You no longer can seek it. When at last you pass on, and bid your world farewell to enter a new one, you can walk into the sunset you have sought all your life. You have found your perfect world and can now look back on the years of struggle, as you realize that when people are perfectly content, it is the end, and they can no longer appreciate it.

Adrienne Marder 8-K

The First Day in Eighth Grade

I had two wonderful years in sixth and seventh grades, participating in school activities and sports. I learned new rules and regulations, met new friends and teachers, and, of course, had more study and homework. I looked forward to associating with an older and more grown-up group.

That first day in eighth grade was an event for me. I dressed in new clothes and left for school much too early. I met my friends again, many whom I had not seen since the school doors closed in June. The school almost seemed strange to me as I entered and met my teachers. I started corridor duty, which had been assigned to me the past June. It was a nice feeling to know that the teachers had enough confidence in me to assign this duty, and I started it with a promise to myself to do the best job I could.

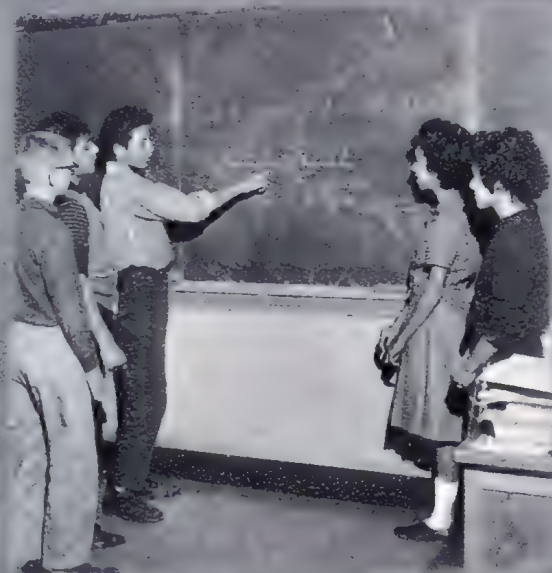

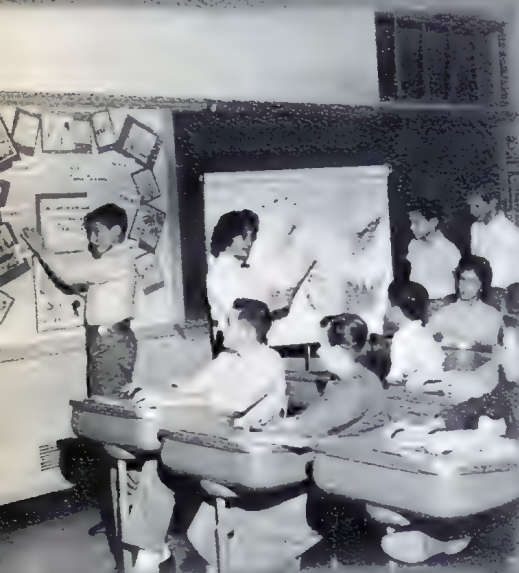

I received new books and they looked more difficult than those of last year. We were told to put on book covers that night. I followed this request. Who wants to pay a fine?

When the bell rang at the end of the school day, I rushed out as fast as I had rushed into school that morning. Now I could collect, sort, and review my impressions of the first day in the eighth grade.

Gaudineer School Fair Shows Emphasis Being Placed on Science Here

By ADRIENNE MARDER

Unless you happened to see the Science Fair in the cafeteria at the Florence M. Gaudineer School in Springfield on January 21, you probably would not realize how much emphasis is placed on science or how interested we students are in the subject.

Approximately 300 guests were fascinated by the work, time, and effort involved in the presentation of the 150 original science projects. Research was done in the fields of zoology, physics, chemistry, meteorology, heredity, and electricity. Each showed weeks of careful work.

By far the proudest young scientists were the five students who received the awards. First prize went to a superior display by Evelyn Nell Aronow entitled "What Makes Grapes Change Into Wine." Second prize went to another fine project by Marc Fanaroff, who called it "The Water Supply of Springfield, New Jersey."

Joseph Rizzo earned the third prize for an amazing project named "Proving Mendel's Law." Barbara Levy's "Optical Illusions" merited enough credit to win her the fourth prize. "Which Material is Most Resistant to Stains," a project by Ronnie Weinberg, won fifth prize.

All these displays were given awards and recognition at the Science Fair at the Arthur L. Johnson Regional High School in Clark on March 24 and 25.

The winning projects were judged by the following standards:

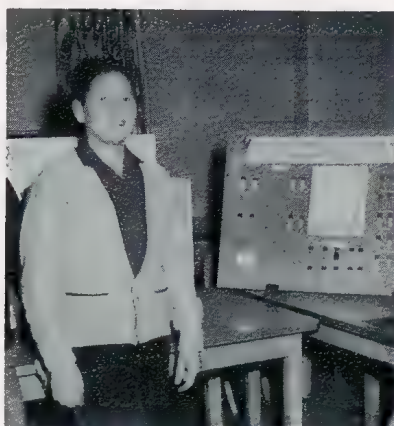

1. Creative ability
2. Scientific thought
3. Thoroughness
4. Skill
5. Clarity
6. Dramatic value.

There were other fine projects that deserve mention. Linda Kuehn's model skeleton called "Ezekiel" was the center of attention. A lot of work went into making Richard Zegar's electrical hook-up of a model town. Carole Devinsky's project on sound and John Schreiber's on atoms showed the results of intensive research.

Some other displays were Larry Forster's research with the effect of dyes on human hair, Pam Blafer's project dealing with photosynthesis and algae, Steve Hart's undertaking to determine how a mouse learns within a maze and David Devore's study of the crystallization of salts. I couldn't begin to mention all of the other fine displays. Nearly every project had both scientific and artistic value.

The Uniteer Staff

Each year the endless toil begins--the selection of a competent yearbook staff, the adoption of an appropriate theme, the arrangement of a layout. All of these are part of the challenge of producing a yearbook.

Then the glamour of being staff members wears thin as we turn our energies to mathematical calculations, changes, corrections, triplicate copies of everything, changes, corrections, photo labeling, changes, more corrections . . .

Eventually the final form of the Uniteer develops and this we present to you--our best effort.

Miss FLORENCE M. GAUDINEER

Our Schools Are in

We already miss our school nurse, Miss Florence Gaudineer, who retired in March. We miss her for many reasons:

- Her gentle touch in caring for playground scrapes and bruises;
- Her keen interest in us as individuals;
- Her acceptance of us as we are, tempered with
- Her intense desire that we seek self-improvement in all areas as well as health;
- Her devotion to the school health program, which benefits all of us;
- Her development of our excellent dental program.

But beyond these obvious reasons, we miss her in other intangible ways:

- She has given her time and efforts graciously, willingly, and unsparingly, to all school children and their families.
- She sincerely cares about all of us and shows her sincerity in words and actions.

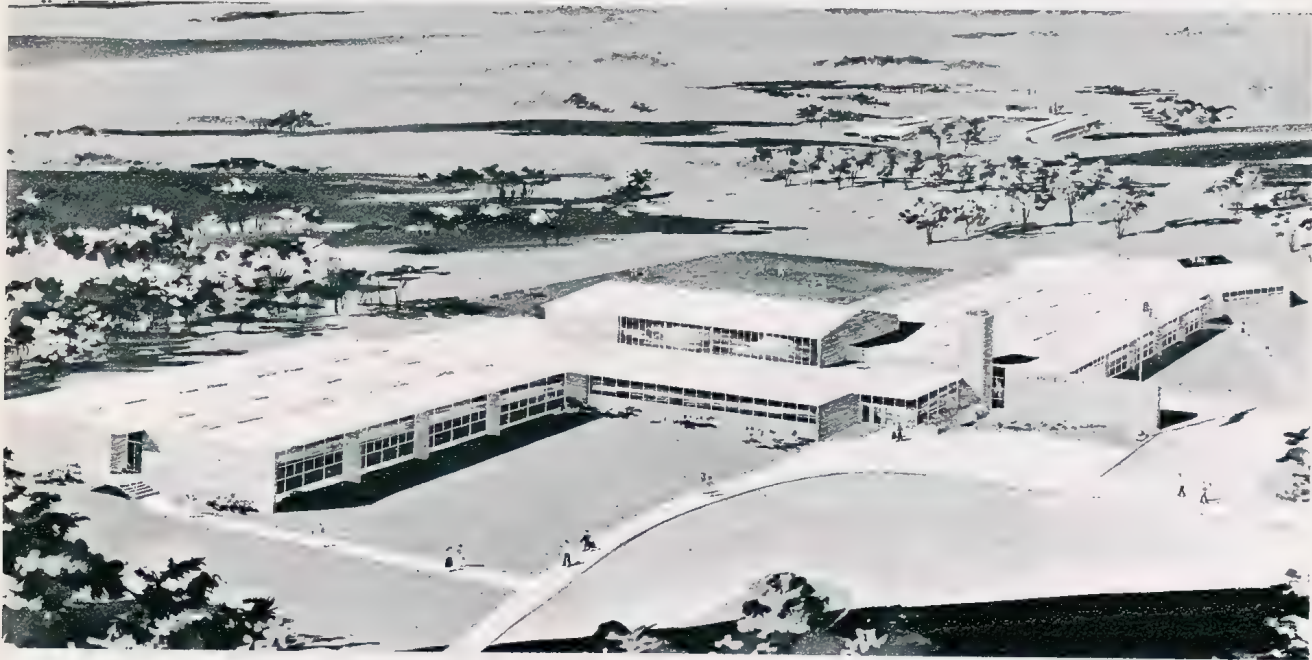

We think of her often and shall remember her forever with great affection.

Their Honor

Howard S. Smith, president of the Springfield Board of Education, and Mrs. Thelma L. Sandmeier turn first spade of earth for the new school.

The new elementary school now under construction on South Springfield Avenue, will be named for our principal, Mrs. Thelma L. Sandmeier. Mrs. Sandmeier has been honored in this way to acknowledge her years of work as a teacher, administrator, and leader of youth.

Mrs. Sandmeier began her career in Springfield as a teacher in the Raymond Chisholm School. She became principal of that school in 1948, and served in this capacity until her appointment as principal of the Florence M. Gaudineer School in 1953.

Mrs. Sandmeier has voiced the hope that she will be able to justify the confidence expressed in her by the action of the Board of Education in the naming of the new school. We feel that she has already justified this action.
